$VOID

MANIFESTO

A DOCUMENT OF NO IMPORTANCE WHATSOEVER

Solana Blockchain · Est. when it felt like it

PREAMBLE

> You are holding — or more likely, scrolling past — the founding document of $VOID, a cryptocurrency built on the Solana blockchain that does absolutely nothing.

This is not a whitepaper. Whitepapers imply research. This is not a litepaper. Litepapers imply effort. This is a voidpaper. It implies nothing, delivers nothing, and yet somehow, against all reason, you're still reading it.

Welcome.

What Is $VOID?

$VOID is a token. That is the full answer.

It does not solve a problem. It does not disrupt an industry. It does not "leverage the synergies of decentralized compute to reshape the paradigm of trustless infrastructure." It sits in your wallet like a philosophical question you'll never answer.

Other projects promise to change the world. $VOID promises you that the world was never going to change in the first place. We find this honesty refreshing. You will too, eventually — probably around 3 a.m. when the charts stop moving and you're left alone with your decisions.

$VOID is not a movement. It is the absence of one. And yet, somehow, people keep showing up.

We don't know why. We don't ask.

Tokenomics of Nothingness

TOTAL SUPPLY

1,000,000,000

$VOID

One billion tokens summoned into existence for no discernible reason.

50% — Liquidity Pool

Paired with SOL and deposited into a liquidity pool, where it will sit patiently, like a dog waiting for an owner who went out for cigarettes in 2019. Liquidity will be locked — not because we're trustworthy, but because it's the bare minimum.

20% — Community Airdrop

Free tokens for the early faithful. "Faithful" is a strong word. "Present" is more accurate. Show up. Get $VOID. There is no task. Existence is the only qualification.

15% — The Void Wallet

Holds tokens and does nothing with them. Will never sell, stake, or vote. A monument to inaction — a digital monk on a permanent vow of silence. We will occasionally caption its balance with quotes from Emil Cioran.

10% — Marketing

Used loosely to make memes, pay for a .wtf domain, and occasionally bribe a crypto influencer into acknowledging our existence. We will never run a paid ad. Ads imply you have something to sell.

5% — Team

Vested over 12 months, because even nihilists have rent. If we rug, we rug in slow motion, one month at a time, while maintaining uncomfortable eye contact. (We will not rug. Rugging requires ambition.)

IV

The Anti-Roadmap

Most projects give you a roadmap. Arrows pointing upward. Phases named after Greek gods. Promises wrapped in timelines that dissolve like cotton candy in rain.

$VOID has no roadmap. Instead, we offer the Anti-Roadmap — a living document of things we will absolutely not do:

- ✕ We will not build an NFT collection (unless it's funny)
- ✕ We will not launch a Layer 2
- ✕ We will not partner with a Fortune 500 company
- ✕ We will not host a conference in Dubai
- ✕ We will not use the phrase "AI-powered" in any official communication
- ✕ We will not create a governance token for the governance token
- ✕ We will not pivot to real estate
- ✕ We will not "go multichain" and pretend that's a feature
- ✕ We will not release a V2

Should any of these items accidentally occur, we will deny it publicly and update the Anti-Roadmap accordingly.

V

Why Buy $VOID?

We genuinely cannot think of a reason.

But let us offer you this: every other token in your wallet is lying to you. They promise mass adoption. They promise passive income. They promise a future where you retire at 31 and live on a catamaran.

$VOID promises you nothing. And in a market built entirely on promises, nothing is the most honest thing you'll ever hold.

You will not get rich from $VOID. You will not get poor from $VOID. You will simply have $VOID. It will be there, in your wallet, between a stablecoin and a regret, quietly reminding you that not everything needs a reason.

> Albert Camus said one must imagine Sisyphus happy.
> We say one must imagine the $VOID holder indifferent.

Buy $VOID. Or don't. We have no preference.

VI

Conclusion

There is no conclusion. Conclusions imply that something was argued, and nothing was.

You have just read approximately 800 words about a token that does nothing, written by people who are fully aware that it does nothing, distributed to a community that celebrates the fact that it does nothing.

If you've made it this far, you are one of us. Not because you believe. But because, for a brief and inexplicable moment, you didn't leave.

That's enough.

$VOID

You scrolled all the way down for nothing.
